Holly de Moissac is a visual artist whose work focuses on societal understandings of decay and its expression within the human body and constructed environments. Influenced by access to ephemeral and transient philosophies from a young age, her practice is driven by the consideration of temporal realities in a permanence-seeking culture. By creating encounters between individuals and deconstructed bodies or spaces, her goal is to provide viewers with an opportunity to converse with temporal aspects of the human condition that do not receive necessary dialogue.

Holly attended the University of Alberta, graduating in 2013 with a BFA in Art & Design, focused in painting and printmaking. She has since shown work nationally and internationally, receiving her first solo show in 2015.
